"Where am I?" I said. "I am in a cloud. That means I'm a raindrop and it's about to storm! What will I do, where will I go?"

It all started when I was going or coming out of a cloud, and it was storming. I couldn't get out at first, but when I did I could tell that it was going to be a long, hard, cold, + wet day. I was a huge raindrop, but yet very heavy, too. I was also very scared and irritated at the fact that I was so high up from the ground. Suddenly, I started to go a little faster, but not very fast. Luckily something held me back from going fast and I think it was the thunder because the storm scared me.

Then, I was headed to the ground to splatter water all over the pavement and die. It took a good while to even close to the ground, though. I even had time to catch up with a buddy of mine named, Carla Drake. She had turned into a raindrop, too. The storm was raging with lightning + thunder so we got a little scared and shivered because it was also cold and frightening.

Finally, we hit rock bottom. There we were, in a storm, sitting there in an uneven cycle of puddles. We weren't injured, but we did become a little bent out of shape. We were deformed. The storm was still teeming with lightning and thunder. Cars were racing to get home, running over us. Last, but not least it was over. The storm passed.

away and we dried up.

If you ever turn up to be a raindrop in a big storm have fun because we surely did. Oh yeah, we almost forgot, don't I mean don't try to stop because it won't work. We had a good time, coming out of the cloud, going to the ground, and hitting rock bottom so I think you should have had sun too, just like we did.
